Railway, Law and Politics

ity, financial arrangements and its mysterious plans in the north, the case of the Pacific Northern Railway throws the whole purpose and scope of the Public Utilities Commission into doubt.

The purpose of the Commission, as its chairman, Dr. Henry F. Angus, has said, is to protect the public in the operations of any public utility, like a railway for instance.

Mr. Bennett said the same thing during the last session of the Legis-No one needed to ask questions about the new railway in the Lagislature because all its affairs would be fully and publicly explored by the trusted Public Utilities Commission. But these affairs have never come before the Commission, though the promoters have begun to construct a railway about which the people of British Columbia know

It is not suggested that the promoters have done anything illegal. Their lawyers say that they can go ahead under the Railway Act and by-pass the Public Utilities Commission until they actually begin to op-erate their railway, a long time

All this may well be in strict accordance with the law, though there is some doubt about it, judging by the complex statement of the Pub-lic Utilities Commission which no lay mind can hope to understand. But if the present work on the railway is in accordance with the law it is not in accordance with the Government's earlier assurance or with the original intent of the Legislature when it passed the Public Utilities

That Act was supposed to cover all existing public utilities and make sure that new ones did not get under way unless they were in the general interest. The Public Utilities Com-

By starting to build a railway perhaps quite legally and certainly at the urgent demand of the Government, the PNR drives a coach and four through the intent if not the letter of the Public Utilities Act. It gets under way without any public hearing at all as to the wisdom of the whole project, its costs, the financial resources of the promoters, the concessions they expect from the Government, the future responsibility for the railway if it fails to

The chief blame for this extra ordinary situation rests not with the promoters but with the Government which compelled them to start work on a fixed deadline, mainly for election purposes. Something must be done to make good the Government's northern vision before the autumn polls opened, even if it was nothing more than the clearing of a few acres. Hence the current comedy of law and politics.

Possibly its strictly legal aspects will be untangled if some "interested" party accepts the Public Utilities Commission's invitation to appear and argue that the railway scheme is unsound. Then the Commission will have to decide also whether the sceme is under its control or not.

If it is not, then the Public Utilies Act should be amended without delay to make sure that it covers all the ground that it was intended to cover. If the Public Utilities Commission cannot rule on a railway osting hundreds of millions of dollars and deeply involving the public interest then it is reduced to impotence and farce. This, we gather from its rather tortured statement, is the opinion of Dr. Angus.

Of course there are a number of other features, too, that mark the reptiles apart. For example, none go through a larval stage breathing by gills as do most amphibians. Moreover, thanks to their scaly covering, reptiles are very independent of water, and in fact some are able to live in desert regions were few animals can exist. They are therefore more widespread and in a greater variety of habitats than are

Few in B.C.

This dependence upon a warm environ ment accounts for the fact that we have so few reptiles in British Columbia. Not counting two marine turtles which occasionally wander into our latitudes we have but three lizards, eight snakes and two turtles as permanent residents, yet altogether there are over four thousand es of living reptiles in the world, mostly in the tropic and temperate Presumedly the extreme north ern limit of range lies in British Colum Most reptiles are confined to the southern part of the province, south the 51st parallel; only a few garter snakes exist north of this latitude.

Lizards show the least specialization in body form, having a head, trunk, four legs and a tail. Our most common kind is the alligator lizard found throughout the southern portion of the province, including Vancouver Island. It prefers dry rocky areas so may be seen around rockslides, along railway cuts, or on rock bluffs where it delights to bask in the sun. Unless you have a quick eye all

Our lizard has the surprising ability of shedding its tail when attacked or even when alarmed. A nervous muscular contraction severs the member which proceeds to do a lively, distracting dance while its owner scuttles away. An ingenious system seals the stump without loss of blood and a new tail begins to grow almost immediately. The process must have considerable survival value since it is shared by several kinds of lizards and also by some salamanders.

Our other two lizards are less commonly seen. One, the western skink, occurs in the Lower Okanagan Valley and in the Nelson area. In this species the tail of the young is a brilliant cobalt blue in color and it is readily dropped as in the case of the alligator lizard.

The horned lizard (sometimes called horned "toad") is a desert species confined to the driest part of the Okanagan around Osoyoos. Since none have been captured for many years they may have disappeared from our province.

Commies Moved In

A few months ago a Soviet engineer was in town and said he'd like to talk to our man about his business. Would our man co-operate with the Communists a little more, please? Our man asked what that would mean. The anaked was supported to the communists of the community of th swer was vague. The engineer said he would return, and he did. Our man again declined interest but the Communist went away with the ominous words that he would return again shortly.

By now our man-talked it over with his family and they decided the time had come to get out. And they did, by train to East Berlin on a pretended holiday and then via the Berlin City subway which runs just like a New York subway with no questions asked provided the passengers aren't carrying four refugees were glad of the further audience. The man told his story with growing strength and conviction. One sensed he had been telling it to himself for months and not knowing whether it made sense or not. To leave or not to leave? Better to remain in your own home and business and suffer the discomforts of communism, or to throw all away, to risk your family's health and happiness, to risk jail, to risk long unemployment, to risk permanent unsuitable employment?

The man talked earnestly, answering questions gently put him with a vigor that belied the fact that apart from our selves and the three judges there was nobody else in that sparse little room. Again and again I felt he was speaking himself too. I was right, he seemed to be saying, it could not have gone on,

The elderly men of the tribunal were not judges nor lawyers but mere men, so to speak, trained in the job of interrogation. They seemed satisfied with the story. The wife who had sat without ord or a motion began to allow her a word or a motion began to allow as-self a quick glance at her husband. She was proud of him. The sister, older and not so well physically, fidgetted nerv-ously with the handle of her purse and when it came her turn to speak she won sympathy without seeking it. The son, about 30, seemed bemused.

A little later in the day we met this foursome as we walked between the lines of crowded buildings. They returned our smiles and seemed to understand our wishes of good luck. And then they furned into a soun kitchen then they turned into a soup kitchen, grasping a metal bowl and spoon and eating gratefully.

Meanwhile 2,600 others were rightly preoccupied with their own stories. Not many old people; perhaps the old folk determined philosophically that they were too old for all this drama; they'd live-or die-where they were.

One had to fight off a feeling of wanting to get away from all this; it seemed too personal a thing to witness, and too sad making. And yet two things kept us there. To understand the happiness one had only to remember that but short days ago they had all of them crossed their personal Rubicons. Now it was done. The slow and all pervasive closing down of the atmosphere of communism would no longer stifle their bodies and minds-like not breathing in and not breathing out.

Difficulties Ahead

Ahead was difficulty and strange ness and personal discomfort and the horrible task of making a life without any of life's old familiars—animate and inanimate. But ahead was life. Behind was slow death, and sometimes not so

I said "most seemed happy most of the time." Yes, alas, some seemed not to see the life ahead, yet but had come because husband or wife or father had come and in their eyes was deep puzzle ent and even fear.

Mental Patients Must Have Beds

THE ROYAL JUBILEE HOS-I pital has drawn attention to the shocking lack of beds to meet the emergency needs of mental cases in this community.

In some instances it is necessary to remove patients still requiring treatment to cots in bathrooms in order to make room for more seri-

This is a situation which demands immediate attention. The load is piling up. The calls made on Mainland facilities are such that more Island cases are coming to Victoria. Moreover, the pressures of population make the existing facilities inadequate.

Types of Delinquents

I regret that in writing about psychopathic delinquents who were apparently born without any sense of decency, consideration for others, shame, or desire for self-improvement. I did not emphasize sufficiently the fact that, for every one of these, there can be 50 youngsters who have youngsters who have good brain, but who get into mischief and perhaps get arrested.

Many of these youngsters promptly learn their esson, and never have any trouble again. can be rehabilitated. In many cases, I think any wise old doctor, psychiatrist, judge, or policeman should be able to tell in a few minutes which type of boy is before him.

I always like to ask the mother what her boy was like as he was growing up. In some cases she says he wah "different" from the day he was born. He may always have been hard to discipline or to control in any way. In the cases of all of these boys, electroencephalograms should be made. Often these records made of the tiny electric currents of the brain show that the boy has inherited an abnormality of the brain, haps related to a disease that produced epilepsy in some ancestor.

Also, the boy should be examined by a neurologist who, according to my friend, Dr. G. N. Thompson, an expert on delinguents, will find in perhaps 94 per cent of the cases, some physical abnormalities. These, again, show that the child's nervous system never developed perfectly.

I am always much interested in the boy's ancestry. If, nowhere in the family can I find anyone who is or was mentally abnormal, I am encouraged, and made more hopeful that the boy can be rehabilitated; but if I find a number of forebears who were psychotic, epileptic, alcoholic, mentally retarded or mentally peculiar in any way, I am fearful of the future—not because of any theory, but because I have found, from 50 years of experience, that a poor type of nervous inheritance is often a great handi-cap to the individual.

cause they come from broken homes, or have to live in a bad part of town, where they get to running with a tough gang. The usually hopeless type of delinquent is the one who was born mentally abnormalwithout a conscience. Theoretically, such a person ought to be kept in som sort of a mental hospital, but because he has no delusions or hallucinations and because, when he wishes to, he can be charming and ingratiating, commitment is not possible.

Many parents with ample means spend enormous sums on psychiatric treatment of their psychopathic son; but, as Dr. Thompson says, this cannot do any good when in the lad there is no foundation on which one can build. My experience, and that of several psychiatrists, agrees entirely with

I was just reading the interesting story of the ill health of Alfred, Lord Tennyson, who throughout his long life kept going into depressions. He was the fourth of 12 children. His father, a scholarly but tem-peramental minister, suffered from moods peramental minister, suffered from moods of deep depression. In them he would take to drink, and would become violent. In school, Alfred and his two older brothers were brilliant. All three could write good poetry. One of them, Charles, became addicted to opium. Among the younger brothers, Edward was soon committed to a mental hospital. Arthur had to be treated for alcoholism, and Septimus was depressed. When Arthur Hallam died, Alfred became depressed and suicidal. For a while, he drank heavily. His sister also went into a nervous breakdown. After losing all of his nervous breakdown. After lossing all of this money, Alfred spent more than a year in a hospital with constant panics and horrors. Throughout the rest of his life, "he had frequent plunges into deep melancholia."

One would think that mental disease appearing in six out of 12 of the children of an alcoholic and violent father would suggest that heredity is an important factor in producing psychoses, but today the taboo against accepting an obvious conclusion is very strong. Psychiatrists usually assure me that in these cases the home environ-ment just must have been bad.

What a Fortune | Missed!

he BBC doing a broadcast when I noticed the slow-speed discs in use there for recording programs.

LONDON LETTER

An engineer explained this novelty to me . . . a microgroove system, 33% revolutions per minute, you can cram so much nore onto a record.

It was then that I had my great brainwave. Why use this system merely for radio studios to record their programs? Why not make it a commercial public, scrap the 78 rpm. system and use 331/2 1 What a pioneer I could have been, back then in 1941. What a fortune I could have made if I'd put that passing thought into action. By 1949 the British record manufacturers were still issuing statements to the press in this tone:

The use of long-playing records is limited. For private gramophones the ordinary 12 inch record is all that is required. We do not anticipate the introduction of long playing records in the near future."

How clouded their crysal ball was. In the following year the first LP made its appearance in British shops—it was Mendelsohn's Italian Symphony—and now, on the 10th anniversary of this revoluation, what a boom there is in the disc world. boom there is in the disc world.

The introduction of 33%, followed by the 45s, have trebled the record industry here in that decade. As I am sure applies also in your part of the world, the British manufacturers just don't bother to make 78s any more . . . which really makes me feel my age. When our daughter brings in a crowd of teen age friends they look at my once proud stack of big black platters the way I as a youngster used to look askance at those old Edison tube-shaped

The record-buyers spent $95,000,000 last year and the interesting thing about this is that related to the British cost of living discs aren't cheap, mainly through the high luxury purchase tax on them. The 45s cost an average $1.65 each and 33½s cost $5, more for classic discs. Prewar cost in Britain of a pop record—23 cents!

DICK MUNN QUALIFIES FOR U.S. JUNIOR EVENT

SEATTLE (Special)—Victoria golfer Dickie Munn, 17, won one of four Pacific Northwest berths for the U.S. junior golf tournament at Kansas City next month by shooting a three-over-par 76 at Inglewood Golf Club here Tuesday. Munn, who was B.C. Amateur finalist last week, tied with Gary Metzker of Seattle for third place in the tournament that involved 40 boys. Bill Tindall, Seattle, led with 72, and Bruce Richards, Seattle, was second with 74.

Munn plays in Kansas City along with the cream of U.S. juniors, Aug. 3-6.

THE SCOREBOARD Harry Grayson

PHILADELPHIA (NEA) — After exactly one day of championship play, Eddie Sawyer decided that the Phillies were the worst major league squad he ever saw and chucked it as manager.

It didn't take Gene Mauch much longer than that to turn the revitalized Redcaps into the most exciting Philadelphia club since the Whiz Kids

What's the biggest difference between managing in the minors and majors? "It's harder to bring a big league club together as a unit," replied Mauch, who was hastily called up from the Minneapolis Millers of the American Association to wrap the Phillies into one king-size package.

"Unfortunately, individual performance gets the money up here. If I had my way, a player would be paid according to team value, not just for individual brillance such as hitting a lot of home runs when they don't mean anything.'

It was pointed out to Mauch that after all professional baseball was a business which needed attractions.

"Certainly," agreed Gene, "baseball can use all the individual attractions it can find, but just try to recall one win-ning outfit that didn't draw well. Take this year's Pirates. No one player sticks out too far ahead of another, but the Pirates possess the most important thing of all. They're hungry and have the healthy approach to togetherness."

When Sawyer threw in the towel, John Quinn knew pre-cisely where to look for his successor. Having obtained permission to dicker, general manager Quinn put in a call for Mauch at 11.30 that night. Gene then was trying to make se out of the Millers in Florida.

Mauch was 27 when he broke in as a playing manager with Atlanta of the Southern Association, a Milwaukee subsidiary, in 1953, and Quinn had his eye on Mauch then, kept track of his further development in Minneapolis. At 34, the brown-eyed, black-haired, handsome Mauch looks younger than some of the Phillies and physically able to still play a lot of infield. Mauch, signed by the Brooklyn Dodgers when he was 17, bounced around between the majors and higher minors like a rebound tumbler. 'I came up much too early," recalled Gene, who was 18 when he opened the 1944 season at shortstop for the Dodgers. "And when I finally learned to hit, I cracked up—a knee gave out and then my back." From whom did Mauch learn most of his baseball? "Leo Durocher was the first major league manager I was exposed to," recollected Gene, "and he had the impact on me that such a forceful manager would have on any impressionable 17-year-old. "I got a lot from Billy Southworth when I was with the Boston Braves. From Billy I learned how to analyze the league. He knew what he needed to beat the other clubsa little here and a little there.

"I spent half the season of 1952 with Eddie Stanky in St. Louis. Now I have as much respect for Stanky as a person as anyone I ever met, but from Eddie I learned what not to do as a manager. He couldn't realize that the game didn't mean as much to all the players as it did to him and a guy like myself. We were willing to break a leg to win. A lot of players aren't.'

Other major league clubs had Gene Mauch in mind when John Quinn paged him.

Downtown Sales Will Save Many Precious Pennies!

By PENNY SAVER

You can really save many pennies this month if you are in the market for charcoal briquettes. Whether you have an outdoor barbecue or just take along a grill to place over a few rocks—briquettes will cook your pienic meal quickly and efficiently. This week a five-pound bag that normally sells at 99 cents can be bought for 79 cents, 10-pound bags have been reduced from $1.99 to $1.49 and 20-pound bags sell for $2.69 instead of $2.99.

Cans of charcoal lighter, too, are included in this sale. Easy to use, you just spray lighter over bed of charcoal, wait for liquid to penetrate, then light. One word of caution, never use lighter on a fire that's already started. During this week, 16-ounce cans are selling at 39 cents instead of 49 cents, while 32-ounce cans have been reduced from 89 cents to 79 cents.

By the way, if you've been thinking of getting extra life-jackets to carry along in the family boat, this is the time. Government-approved jackets, for both children and adults have been reduced from $4.95 to $2.95.

nave been reduced from $4.95 to $2.95. Each jacket contains 20 ounces of kapok and is approved for power craft, anywhere up to 40 feet. Kapok is sealed in plastic film pads so that jackets' tendency to soak up water is minimized and jackets are that much easier to dry out. Jackets are all in a smart tangerine and yellow plaid.

If you've been meaning to replace a tea strainer that's a little the worse for wear, this is the time to do it. Sturdy metal strainers, complete with plastic handle, are selling for nine cents. Normal price of these is 29 cents.

NEW ATTITUDE REQUIRED-Returned from a gloriously hot two weeks vacation on Salt Spring Island to discover a faint blizzard hovering over Channel 6.

This came as a distinct shock for the local picture has always been as steady and black and white as the proverbial motion picture. I say a distinct shock as t is no secret that CHEK-TV president David strong and partner William Rea have expended some where in the neighborhood of $300,000 to move the outlet's transmitter site from Saanich to Saturna Island and boost power from 1,800 watts to maximum power 100,000 watts.

A telephone call to Mr. Armstrong Tuesday morning elicited the information that Victorians must adopt a new attitude towards Channel 6.

Of course, Mr. Armstrong amended, there will be spoils about the mother of the bride who almost spoils the marriage of Bob and Betty Nelson when she offers them a house.

 Very few comparatively, Mr. Armstrong said.
 What there were came from local viewers. Elsewhere, such as at Nanaimo, Powell River, Courtney and so on nothing but delight was expressed. The new transmitting situation has meant that viewers in these up-Island areas now can receive nigh-perfect reception on rabbit ears.

CHEK TV is also being received well on rabbit ears in Vancouver and the lower Fraser Valley. Meanwhile viewers are expressing their delight in Channel 5 reception that is now being received in most quarters so bright and clear that it is akin to finding a brand new station on the dial.

Commenting on this Mr. Armstrong said gallantly:

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP) — Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold conferred separately today with Congolese and Belgian representatives as pressure mounted for a quick withdrawal of Belgian troops from the troubled Congo.

UN action was considered urgent because of new threats by the Congolese government to call for Soviet military intervention if the council fails to get the Belgian forces out.
